The use of Dalmatians carried over to the horse-drawn wagons that firefighters rode to the scene of a fire. When a fire alarm sounded, the Dalmatians would run out of the firehouse, barking to let bystanders know that they should get out of the way because the firefighters' wagon would soon come roaring by.

Behind the spots: Sparky the fire dog. Dalmatians have been associated with firemen since the days where they dutifully trotted beside horse-drawn fire engines. There once lived a small Dalmatian puppy who used to sit near a fence at a school.

You've probably seen this spotted dog on the back of a fire truck or in the movies, The breed is very versatile and has been used for many purposes over the years. Pups generally don't grow their trademark spots until about four weeks. 10 Aug - 21 sec - Uploaded by National Fire Protection Association This PSA take place at home with Sparky Spots, a group of with Sparky Spots, a group of.
